“ Thinking of you today after you visited me in a dream. I love looking back on the memories of you, and although it's been so many years since I last saw you, I can still hear your laugh like it was yesterday. You always had a kind heart and knew how to cheer up everyone around you. P. S. You still owe me a purse. ;) <3

“ It seems like a lifetime ago that I was a permanent fixture at your house. You were always good people if it were a friend. Your laugh and you pacing that damn porch along with how passionate you would get telling stories... I'll always remember. Rest well. -Lyla

“ Chris was in my life a short time when we were in 6th grade. We kept in touch for a little while after my family moved in the middle of the year. I remember his humor, teasing me for reading lame Babysitters Club Books, and the comics he drew. Someday when my daughter is older and I'm reminiscing, I'll tell her that my first slow dance was with Chris and he was my first boyfriend too. My deepest sympathy to Chris' family and friends. I hope the love and support of all who care about you helps carry you through this difficult time.
