“ Kyle,
When you and Toby became good friends in junior high I thought you were the coolest thing ever. Your long hair, heck I even thought your name was cool. You were always good to me my friend. You will be dearly missed.
Hopefully you and Toby are playing some beautiful golf courses in heaven.
Rest in peace ❤️

“ Kyle was cool...nowadays I guess they are called "influencers". He had fluorescent (black light) posters in his room, wore super high platforms shoes when they first came out and was always in style...or ahead of the style. Best memories were just hanging out in the neighborhood and listening to music...Alice Cooper, KISS and Queen. Excellent athlete. Very good catcher in baseball as we played on the Dairy Queen and Harden Stockton teams together for years...his dad painted all of our batting helmets green with metal-flake in them...made us all feel cool on the field. Rest in Peace my friend.

You described Kyle perfectly, Brad. He was the epitome of "cool" and was always ready with a quick smile and a head nod when you saw him in the hallways at Eisenhower JH or WHS. I hope his family takes pride in knowing he was well liked and respected.

“ Family isn't always blood. Family is made up of people who love you, are there when you need them and always looking out for you.

God places these special people in your life because he knows you need them. And God knew I needed Uncle Kyle. He was the father figure I needed in my life when my own couldn't be. He was a man I looked up to, trusted, felt safe with, admired and loved. He was cool. He was funny. He was loving.

I am grateful to have had him in my life and always loving me as one of his own kids. He loved everyone!! His impact and love was so strong that when it came to my wedding, there was no one else, besides my brother, who I wanted to walk me down the aisle. A moment I will always cherish.

The thing that makes our families so special, is that once you are a part of it....you will always be a part it. Not only did he watch us grow, he watched our own kids grow and was a part of their lives too.

I am so honored and blessed that God placed this wonderful man in our lives. I hope he knows how much he was loved by us all. He is going to be missed deeply.
