“ Quinton was my childhood. He was so brilliant, accepting, and creative. I've ran across his drawings the other day, actually. As kids, he explained to me that he had "Q's" world, and made characters with intricate backgrounds and personalities in them. I would listen to him explain it all, and he'd be so excited to show me his art. I was quite annoying, and would request drawings from him all the time. He did them, though. Every other day was something new, and I loved them.

I hope he understood how happy he had made me. I wish we had never grown apart, I've missed him so very much these past years. I'm so sorry, Quinton.. I wish I could reach out to you one more time, and I wish you could tell me what all you've been up to and show me all the new art you've created.
