“ *Aunt Tillie was very dear to our family. When I was only four years old, my grandfather, Lee McGhan passed away. Aunt Tillie made a beautiful, yellow dress from his funeral ribbon for my doll. This was to be the first of many dolls in my international collection. The dolls have long since passed on to relatives except for the little doll in the yellow, crepe dress. She has stood for many years on my bookshelf looking down at me each night- now, a loving symbol and memory of a most precious Aunt. I had not seen Aunt Tillie since her 50th wedding anniversary some 15 years ago. I was to visit Aunt Tillie the first week in November; however, the Lord had other plans for her. I know that she is in a beautiful and peaceful place free from earthly pain. Along with my parents, she will have a very special and spiritual place in my heart and will never be forgotten.
